Robert Simpson Gave George Wood Suit Too

Early Days In Newmarket
Recalled By 91-Year-
Old Citizen

WAS CARRIAGE PAINTER

Was Robert Simpson, the Newmarket merchant who went to Toronto to found one of the largest mail-order houses in this country, a good business man?

George Wood, who lives with Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Curtis at 17 Niagara St., told The Era this week how he painted for Robert Simpson the Botsford St. house in which Uriah Marsh died two weeks ago.

"Robert Simpson built that house (Robert Brodie was the builder), and I painted it for him, inside and out," said Mr. Wood, who marks his 91st birthday on Sunday. "When I had finished he asked me for my bill. I gave it to him. He paid it in full. Now," he said, "come down to the store with me and pick yourself out a piece of cloth from which you would like to have a suit made."

"I did and he sent me upstairs to be measured, and made a suit for me," Mr. Wood said.

"Was Mr. Simpson an exceptionally capable business man?"

HOLD HOCKEY MEETING

The annual hockey meeting of the Newmarket Hockey Club will be held in the King George hotel on Monday evening, March 22, at 8.15. The financial report for the past year will be presented. Election of officers for 1937-38 will take place.

"He paid strict attention to his business, and people had confidence in him," was the reply.

"How much was your bill for painting the house?" "About $75 or $80," Mr. Wood recalled.

"I was a naughty boy at school, the old grammar school on Millard Ave., and used to play truant a lot," Mr. Wood said. "My father said: 'If you won't go to school, I'll put you to work.' So he put me in charge of his paint shop on Main St. at the age of 16 years. The shop, which I eventually sold to the Metropolitan railway, was on the south-west corner of Main and Mill Sts. (it is called Queen St. now) opposite Luesbys."

"The first job I did was to paint on the door: 'No credit for work done here.' My father said: 'The boy will have to take that.'"

TANNERS WIN THEIR WAY TO HOCKEY FINAL

Specialty Boys Fight With Oak Ridges For Play-
Off Berth

SEMI-FINAL SCORE 1 - 0

The Davis Leather Company team assured themselves of a place in the finals of the Mercantile League when they defeated the Office Specialty team in a semi-final game in the Aurora arena on Friday evening by a score of 1-0. This was the first defeat of the season for the Specialty club.

The game started off with a bang, both teams tearing into each other at top speed, and gave the Aurora fans a real display of hockey. The checking was very heavy throughout the game and both defences bumped the incoming forwards hard and kept the forward lines from getting in close on the goal.

There was no scoring in the opening periods. Although Joe Peat scored for the tanners, this goal was not allowed. Both teams had many opportunities to score in these periods, but the rival goalkeepers turned all their shots away. About half way through the final period H. Townsley opened the scoring for the Davis team, on a pass from H. Brown and A. Cullen, and this goal proved the only counter of the game, and although the Specialty came close to tying up the count, in the remaining time, on numerous occasions, they could not get the equalizer.

The final score was Davis Leather 1, Office Specialty 0. For the winners C. Turan, Bob McCabe, Joe Peat, Ross Smart and Mickey Smith turned in extra good games, while all the players played a real smart brand of hockey. For the Specialty, W. Wilson, H. Gibney, Aub. Rae and J. Tunney looked the most impressive, while other players turned in a class game.

The game this week between the Office Specialty and Oak Ridges should decide which team is to take on the Davis team in the final series, and should the weather remain cold, some hard-fought games are assured before a winner is declared.

The teams: Office Specialty: goal, J. Tunney; defence, Bond and Woodcock; wings, Rae and Gibney; centre, Wilson; alternates, Brammer, Evans, Giles and O'Halloran, Waller. Davis Leather: goal, M. Smith; defence, J. Peat and R. Smart; wings, R. McCabe, C. Turan; centre, W. Townsley; alternates, M. Stickwood, H. Townsley, A. Cullen, H. Brown and H. Thoms.

Citizens' Band Brings Guest Artist Here For After Church Event

The Orillia Kilties will be here Sunday evening, to play their sponsored concert under the sponsorship of the Newmarket Citizens' Band.

It was rumored about town that this concert would have to be passed up because of the epidemic of influenza, but word came from the north this week that all the boys were on the mend and promised, an even better concert than previously reported.

The concert will commence immediately after church services, and it is hoped the citizens of Newmarket will pack the town hall.

By all reports, seating capacity will be at a premium, so it would pay to be early and be sure of a good seat.

First Game Leaves Sutton Greenshirts Two Down

Culverwell's Absence And Tough Luck Prove Hard
On Sutton

Gravenhurst defeated the Sutton O. H. A. entry at Sutton Saturday night by a 6-4 score in a game of wide-open hockey before one of the largest local crowds on record.

The Sutton attack was weakened due to the absence of Culverwell, but it is expected that he will be on the line-up on Wednesday when the Sutton club face a two-goal handicap in their return game.

Gravenhurst put on their usual galling attack at the opening of the first period and after five minutes Dobson slammed the puck past Smith during a scramble beside the net. The visitors added their second counter during a mix-up in the corner as the puck glanced into the net when shot from behind.

Ken Wilmott was handed a penalty and although Sutton put on a strong offensive, they failed to beat Hayton. Carpenter broke away while Gravenhurst were playing five forwards, but failed to outguess Hayton in the net.

During a scramble at the Sutton blue-line, Wood broke through alone to beat Smith for the third counter as the period ended. As the second period began Wood was struck in the face as he attempted to centre the puck.

Wood retired to receive medical attention, and as he returned to the play he secured his second counter to make the score 4-0. Brady for Sutton was finally rewarded for his fine efforts when he broke through alone to beat Hayton. Milroy scored three minutes later on a clever play on which he was assisted by Carpenter and Burchell.

The Sutton team began to carry the play and had a decided edge for the remainder of the period, which ended 4-2. Less than one minute after the play started for the last session, Burchell weaved through the entire team to score unassisted. Burchell and Milroy combined on a smooth play to even the score 4-4, Burchell taking Mil-

The incident related in this week's instalment of "Chips and his Chums," on page seven this week, is based, like most of the incidents in this nature serial, on an actual occurrence. The alleged shooting occurred, however, in the southern end of the county, and possibly happened through ignorance of the treaty between Canada and the United States, implemented by legislation, which forbids the shooting of insectivorous birds.

Carpenter was handed a penalty and Gravenhurst put out five forwards and were finally rewarded when the puck rolled in when shot from behind by Dobson. Dobson returned five minutes later to gain his third counter of the game, on which Smith, who played a fine game, had no chance, making the score 6-4. The game ended 6-4 with Sutton facing a two-goal handicap when they play the return game in Gravenhurst on Wednesday night.

TAKE ON BELLEVILLE

Sutton Intermediates defeated the fast-skating Gravenhurst team at Gravenhurst by 8-4 last night. This gave Sutton the round by 12-10.

It was a wide-open game before a packed arena, with Sutton supporters well represented.

Jack Culverwell opened the scoring in the first five minutes of play when he weaved through the entire Gravenhurst team and scored unassisted. Wilmott tied the score for Gravenhurst before the end of the period.

In the second period Sutton made the score 2-1 when Milroy took Shupe's pass to score while Sutton was one man short.

Culverwell got his second score on a pass from Milroy. Then he scored again unassisted, making the tally 4-1.

In the final period Milroy took Burchell's pass to beat Hayton in the northern net. Barnes and Harman combined to score for Gravenhurst, leaving the score 5-2.

Sutton was not satisfied and Carpenter took Milroy's pass directly in front of the net and scored. Burchell took a perfect pass from Milroy and added yet another goal.

Barnes beat Smith in the Sutton net on an individual effort, to be followed by Dobson for Gravenhurst. The score was now 7-4.

Burchell made the final goal for Sutton on a pass from Milroy. During a scramble that followed Wichman slashed Smithy and was put off for the rest of the game.

Carpenter was penalized shortly afterward and during a fracas which followed Sutton was given a penalty shot. Culverwell beat Hayton but overstepped the line. On a second chance he failed to score.

Referees were Bert Hedges, Toronto, and Bert Corbeau, Port Colborne.

Sutton now meets Belleville, probably at Belleville Monday and at Sutton Wednesday.

Villains Win Title As Kiddies Have Ice Night

Mayor Calls For Minute's
Silence In Memory Of Tom Kirk

RACES ARE KEEN STUFF

What a success was "Tom Kirk's night" at the arena Tuesday evening!

Jack Frost, with a bit of nippy weather that made perfect ice, and a host of the youngsters' friends in the factories and along Main St. made it possible.

Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd made a short speech, explaining that the late Tom Kirk, who was a county constable, had originated the youngsters' night on the ice. Dr. Boyd called for a minute's silence in memory of Sergeant Kirk.

Dr. Boyd also stated that the prizes given away and other incidentals cost about $150.

The youngsters crowded in the arena by the hundreds. Chief Constable Tom Hall was on hand helping to direct the much-congested human traffic within the arena.

The hockey game, which opened the evening's fun, was a smart little exhibition of the brand of hockey played by public and separate school youngsters. The Villains and the Consols,

COLLEGE TEACHER SPEAKS ON OLYMPICS

Ill following his return from the college ski weekend at Huntsville, A. B. Hodgetts, Pickering College, was unable to fulfil an engagement to tell the Lions club on Monday evening about his trip to the Olympic games in Germany last summer. He will address the next meeting.

A commemorative memorial service was held a week ago in Memorial hall, Salem College, Winston-Salem, N.C., for Mrs. Francis C. Ansoombe, who died Feb. 27. Mrs. Ansoombe was the wife of Dr. Francis Ansoombe, head of the department of history at Salem College, and was herself at one time teacher of art at the college.

A memoir, prepared by Dr. Ansoombe, was read by Dr. Rondthaler.

The memoir of Mrs. Ansoombe, prepared by her husband and read by Dr. Rondthaler, in part, follows:

Margaret Ellen Lambie Ansoombe was the youngest daughter of the late Andrew and the late Rebecca Chapin Lambie. Her parental grandfather was, as the Scots say, "a man of parts." He was of a distinguished family of Scotland and was a manufacturer of Paisley shawls. He was financially and socially ruined by unwise backing a note for an acquaintance. He went to Canada for a new start, and Andrew Lambie, her father, was born a few months after his parents' arrival on this continent. He was a typical Scot, God-fearing, authoritative, canny, practical, economical, successful, tall and bearded. Whether as carpenter, storekeeper, farmer, or private teacher, he was financially successful. Margaret owed much to such a dignified, imperious, scrupulous, and thrifty father.

Her mother was of French Huguenot extraction, and some of her forebears had been exiled for their Protestant views. Her mother was very petite. From her French ancestry Margaret acquired her artistic tastes and skill.

Margaret was born in eastern Ontario and spent her childhood there. She then removed with

VETERANS ARE TO MEET IN NEW HALL, NEW NIGHT

The next regular monthly meeting of Newmarket Veterans will be held on Monday, March 29, at the R. S. A. Bugle Band hall at 8 p.m. sharp.

All veterans are requested to be on hand at this meeting to inaugurate the new quarters.

"Am I my brother's keeper? Why should I abstain from the use of alcoholic beverages?" was the subject of Mary Henry of Newmarket competing in the oratorical contest held at the annual convention of the Ontario Temperance Federation last Thursday evening in Toronto.

"There is need for total abstinence," Miss Henry declared. "Listen! 260 British doctors denounce beer! They signed a protest against the extensive advertising of breweries. The protest stated that the promotion of beer drinking among the young is a step backward and is detrimental to the best interests of the individual and proved over and over again that moderate drinking such as now receives general sanction is incompatible with health."

"H. W. Moody, world champion tennis player, in an article in Saturday Evening Post some time ago, said the precision which tennis demands makes necessary total abstinence. Of this the tennis player is well aware, as are competitors in other sports. Even one glass of beer will make a difference in one's eye co-ordination and balance. This is but one of the cases where sport champions or trainers recognize physical harm in alcoholics."

"Not only governments in many provinces of Canada (our own Ontario included) but the congress of the United States led the people to believe that government control of the sale of liquor would be of financial benefit to the country. But the high cost of alcoholic beverages robs the family of the necessary health-giving foods. Desire of adults for their drinks robs the infant of its milk. Ill-nourishment is

MINIMUM WAGE LAW

About the minimum wage for men bill now before the legislature, there are at least two things to say. First, most employers will welcome a reasonable minimum wage for men. No matter how generous, an employer must be exceptionally successful to pay higher wages than those paid by competing businesses. Factories which are competing with factories in other provinces may in some instances be handicapped until other provinces adopt a similar minimum. But, generally speaking, a minimum wage should enable all employers now paying low wages to raise their wage level. The new law will enable some employers to raise their wages and will force others, who could even now pay better wages, to do better.

May Hurt Farmers

The second thing to say is that the new law will raise the cost of most manufactured commodities. Farmers may find that a bag of potatoes will buy just a little less than it otherwise would. We do not suppose that Premier Hepburn, himself a farmer, considers this point, but we give him credit for his courage in trying to put an end to outrageous wage conditions. Of course, the minimum wage may increase slightly the demand for farm products, but we still think the farmer will be poorer. We wonder if the minimum wage law will apply to farm help.

FIT FOR A KING

A man in the city has thought a big thought and has written to a newspaper about it. His idea is that the city of Toronto should spend $100,000 furnishing Casa Loma and invite the Duke of Windsor to occupy it. "It's fit for a king," says he. The surprising part of the proposal, to our way of thinking, is that the man who had the idea signed his name to the letter. We would think that he would be known forever among his friends as the man who wanted the city to invest $100,000 in an invitation to the Duke of Windsor to occupy Casa Loma. We would think that the duke would be just as likely to accept an invitation to occupy the Sharon temple.

Sharon Temple

Now there's an idea. Probably the duchess would shop in Sharon and Newmarket, and what prestige that would give us. Land values in East Gwillimbury would jump. Visitors to Callander would make a point of going by way of Sharon. The province would build a king's highway right past the duke's door. And the duchess could tell her guests that not a hammer sounded when her house was erected.

Advertising

The newspaper correspondent writes of Casa Loma: "It is an eyesore, a detriment to its district. Suppose H. R. H. should occupy it for 40 years, or less. It will sell the day he vacates for enough to cover the present arrears of taxes and interest and all future taxes and interest. This would be all a separate pitcher of cream for Toronto. It will come because of the advertising." There it is, advertising, but we doubt if the duke will go into the advertising business.

STOUFFVILLE'S WOLVES

Every time we read an account of a Whitechurch township council meeting we wonder why our friend the enterprising editor of the Stouffville Tribune does not capitalize for advertising purposes on one of the natural assets of his end of Whitechurch township. We are thinking of wolves and what Editor Jim Curran of Sault Ste. Marie has done with the Algoma wolf. Mr. Curran has secured a great deal of splendid advertising for his city by his defence of the wolf. The Algoma wolf is a friendly, harmless child of nature, Mr. Curran has told the world.

Why Not License Them?

Just last week the shooting of a wolf was reported at Vivian, almost in the Stouffville Tribune's backyard, and there have been quite a few other wolves shot in the Stouffville district in recent years. As we read the Whitechurch township council reports of farmers being reimbursed for the slaughter of sheep "by a dog or dogs unknown," we wonder that the dog license revenue (out of which these sheep claims are paid) is sufficient to bear the strain. If wolves also are culprits, why not license them too? In any event, the Whitechurch wolf is not the tame beast that dwells in Algoma and the Stouffville editor should be able to make something out of him.

GONE IS THE BOOTJACK

Recalling boyhood days in Stouffville, W. J. White, now 87 years old, who has lived most of his life in western Canada, writes interestingly in the Stouffville Tribune of bygone days. His father was a shoemaker. "Shoes, known as shoes, were for girls and women. It was long boots for men and growing-up boys. They were a marvel in style and build, saying nothing about inconvenience. They were long boots, reaching well up to the knees. They had colored tops, and were pulled on by the use of leather straps. When removed at night it was: 'Mother, where's the bootjack?'"

Crinoline And Eggs

The writer tells of the crinoline, which "resembled an over-sized bird cage." He recalls a lady driving up to a Stouffville grocery store with a "beautiful span of greys." She had baskets of eggs and crocks of butter in the wagon. These she would trade at the store. Alighting was a painstaking process, but in spite of all precautions she did permit spectators one glimpse of her ankles. But was the hoop-skirt, we wonder, much more inconvenient than the hobble-skirt of 20 or 25 years ago?

"Real Socialism"

This interesting writer declares that the good old days of his youth were the days of "real socialism." There was a quilting, with one of the village ladies in the corner entertaining the others with a "melodeon." Then there was the apple-paring bee. It often turned into a "pairing" bee. There was the "sugaring-off" and the "barn-raising." Ah, those were the days of real socialism.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH

There has been some discussion recently of the French-English situation in this country. We have quite strong opinions on this subject, and would like to hear from anyone who disagrees. We'll be pleased to publish your letters. A Toronto newspaper expresses the opinion that French is "unnecessarily" forced upon the English-speaking people of Ontario in radio announcements, and says that "bi-lingual hodge-podge disfigures practically every government publication."

Worth Learning, Worth Hearing

The way we feel about it is that there are two races living in this country, and that the presence of two races is a splendid thing for both. The people of Ontario would be foolish to spend, as they do, thousands and thousands of dollars to teach their children French in high school and university and to object to the opportunity these same students of French have of hearing the language spoken over the radio occasionally. If French is worth learning, it is worth hearing. Learning another language tends to make us a little more broad-minded and a little more understanding of our own language.

What Constitutes Hodge-podge?

As for "bi-lingual hodge-podge," we contend that it takes more than two ingredients to make hodge-podge. More than that, in printing public documents in two languages, the dominion government is doing only what private business is doing. Do not the two languages appear on most household requirements purchased in this country? When the government starts spending money in ways that private business does not you can suspect it of inefficiency, paternalism or socialism, but when it does only what private business does you may conclude that it is doing something unavoidable. For ourselves, we would say that if one language is to be left off ready-mix pancake flour packages and public documents, to leave off the English, or else how are we to keep up our very inadequate French? Moreover, we can use ready-mix pancake flour without reading the directions, and we would be glad to have people forced to conclude, after sampling our excellent pancakes, either (1) that we don't need to read the directions or (2) that we can read French. Either conclusion would be flattering.

GIVING NATURE A CHANCE

The game restoration plan of Aubrey Davis of Newmarket may bring a lot of visitors to King township and incidentally Newmarket. The Renfrew Mercury writes under the heading "Giving Nature a Chance":

"At the convention of the Ontario Hunters' Game Protective Association in Toronto one enthusiastic delegate said he was to embark shortly upon an experiment to show how a countryside can be made to produce wild life. He stated that his work would centre in King township, near Toronto.

"There are few people in Ontario who will not wish him well. The more of wild life this province possesses the greater will be the influx of tourists, come to shoot during the hunting season, more to operate cameras at other times. Someone has said that tourists are more interested in live deer and rabbits, and partridges and pheasants, than in dead ones, and this being so, we should have in Ontario more of these animals and birds, plus the wild duck and the wild goose. See what a public attraction Jack Miner's sanctuary is!"

of Mount Albert visited Mrs. P. Brillingner on Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Burnside of Montreal are in town on account of the death of Mrs. Burnside's father. Dr. Robert Wesley of Toronto was home a few days ago to see his mother, who is ill. By Isabel Inglis Colville
"The Mikado"

I can imagine some of you saying "What can the writer of the 'Common Round' know about the emperor of Japan?"

And you'd be right, for who am I, to fathom the, to me, utterly incomprehensible working of the Japanese mind.

I've only known one Japanese in my life—I gave him lessons on the piano—and he gave me lessons in what patience and ingenuity could do.

"I don't expect to have my piano for about two weeks," said he, when making arrangements for lessons.

"In that case, wouldn't you rather wait till you got it?" I asked him.

But, "no, no," said he, "if you will allow me, I'll make a diagram of the piano."

I felt like saying, "Go to it," but in the face of his precise English, I replied most primly and properly, "Certainly, do so," all the time a bit mystified.

However, I found out, when he came for his next lesson, he knew where every note was, and as I had marked in the fingering for the scale of C, he could play it with no difficulty.

But what I was thinking of, when I wrote my title, was something entirely different. The other evening we saw that the Mikado—Gilbert and Sullivan's, not Japan's—was to be given over the radio, so turning down the lights and leaving the room lit only by the glow of the fire, we settled down for an hour of solid enjoyment.

Looking into the fire, I could see the faces and hear the voices of those with whom I had sung and acted in the four or five times I had taken part in its presentation in various places.

It brought to mind the first time—most of the members of the chorus were in their teens, and we were feeling pretty important, and as our kimonos were very pretty and becoming, we imagined we were going to look charming.

We had been told to use no make-up till we got to the theatre, and when we got there we were lined up and they started in to make Japs of us.

Now Japanese women are often charming, but no one could say we were.

They used a horrid brown powder, and by the time they had finished with our eyebrows, if we had known what a "sit-down strike" was, we'd have staged one on the stage.

But there was nothing we could do. The overture was starting by the time we were finished and the show went on.

That night before I sought my bed, I labored with cold cream and hot soap and water, till I was tired, trying to remove the brown powder.

With what success will be imagined, when my mother came to me next morning, and flapping a pair of pillow cases before me, proceeded in no uncertain terms to tell me what she thought of all such make-up.

"Well," said I to myself, "never again; if they don't like me the way I'm going tonight they have only to say so."

For, added to mother's disgust, my face looked as if I had taken a mud bath and only partially rubbed it off.

So I hid me off to a drug-store and bought theatre rouge and eyebrow pencil, and armed with these proceeded to do what I thought best.

"It's my own face," said I to myself, "and surely I can do what I like with it."

Not having had previous experience I forgot lip-stick, but a little thing like that didn't matter. I used WATER COLORS.

Of course, just after our first stage entrance I got nervous and licked it off, but what of that—it was a mere detail.

Strange to say, many other girls did their own make-up too. Maybe we didn't look so Jap—no, I don't think we did the FIRST night, either, but we certainly were a trifle more ornamental.

All these things kept going through my head as I listened to the familiar music.

As I listened to the Mikado declaim—

"A more humane Mikado
Never did in Japan exist;
To nobody second, he's certainly reckoned

A true philanthropist."
And as he portrays his ambition in—

"My object all sublime,
I will achieve in time
To make the punishment
Fit the crime," etc.

I wondered, in view of all we hear as to the reformatories, jail farms and penitentiaries, if something could not be gained from the pompous silly words.

Our governments have never I think, tried "to make the punishment fit the crime." Criminals are dealt with "en masse," and no study is given to individual cases, even when they are first offenders, perhaps imprisoned for some slight offence, more the fault of environment and idleness than deliberate wrongdoing. But perhaps some day our rulers may endeavor not to "Make each prisoner pent

Unwillingly represent
A source of innocent merriment," but a source of what can be done by study of the needs, mental, physical and spiritual, of the individual.

Mice And Men

On the ground that sit-down strikers are trespassers, Premier Hepburn will have none of them in this province, he announces. Furniture strikers have won higher wages.

Premier Mackenzie King had a two-day conference with President Franklin Roosevelt in Washington last week. Mr. King said it was "obvious" that he should ascertain Mr. Roosevelt's views on matters of world concern before attending the imperial conference in London.

In Spain it is expected that the loyalists will evacuate Madrid and take up new positions nearer Valencia.

The Alberta government has ruled that it will lease for oil purposes only every other section of government land north of Edmonton. One surmise is that the government is reserving the rest of this oil land to be developed under social credit financing.

A diver working for the city of Port Arthur was 30 feet below the surface of Lake Superior examining the city's water intake pipe. He refused to come to the surface until his wage demands were met.

Sit-down strikers have brought work to an end in Chrysler, Hudson, Fisher and Chevrolet plants in Detroit. The strike is instigated by United Automobile Workers of America asking recognition of the new workers' organization.

In a splendid budget statement on Tuesday Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn announced a surplus of $7,000,000, in addition to the reduction of the province's gross debt by $33,000,000 to $656,000,000. Mr. Hepburn said that the province had followed a "pay-as-you-go" policy, including relief expenditures, and that the credit of the province was never higher.

W. H. Moore, Liberal M.P. for the neighboring county of Ontario, voted against the federal government in a want of confidence motion on Tuesday regretting that the government has done nothing effective toward ending unemployment.

NOTES TO YOU

A Traveller's Note

Usually, we derive a good deal of pleasure from smoking-car conversations. We seldom fail to learn something new. When we boarded our train for Winnipeg last Thursday we looked forward to long hours spent discussing the relative merits of Liberal and Conservative, of goose grease and bear fat, of the winter of '74 and of the feeding habits of the Canadian moose.

This time we were disappointed. Nothing new, the same old stuff. Even the weather seemed the same as on our last jaunt.

Just before we reached Winnipeg, however, we received our reward. The conversation veered from political beliefs and swung to other diseases. We landed on rheumatism.

"Well," said an Alberta ranchman of some 70 summers, "when I was river-driving in the spring of '87, a Frenchman told me of a sure cure for the rheumatics."

Resignedly, the rest of the "boys" settled back to hear the worst. But it was even worse than that.

"Just before you go to bed," the rancher explained, "you turn your shoes upside down on the floor."

To the everlasting credit of his listeners, it can be said that not one of them permitted the merest flicker of a smile to cross his face, not even when the rancher went further . . . and it didn't take long, neither," he said. "Ten or 15 seconds will do it."

A Superstitions Note

Most superstitions have had, at some time, some remnant of truth behind their origin. It was not until we had reached Winnipeg that we hit on a possible reason for the "shoes-upside-down" belief. Here it is:

River men wear high boots that reach almost to their knees. We can well imagine that in the course of a day on the river, even the best boots might become damp. If not properly dried out at the end of a day, rheumatism might follow on the morrow.

To avoid rheumatism, therefore, turn your boots upside down and let them drain dry. A nice bit of deduction, if we do say it ourselves.

Sometimes subscribers want to pay for The Era for two years in advance to save themselves the bother of renewing annually. We are glad, of course, to accept payment for any number of years. The Era has been published for 55 years, and is likely to be published for 85 more.

When you do pay for two years you cut in half our expense in sending out expiration notices, changing our records, and in changing the date on your paper.

You also give us the use of some of your money a year before you are required to do so.

We are therefore announcing a subscription rate of $3.00 for two years

A Note on Religion

Our mother has just concluded a telephone conversation with a lady. Mother asked the lady if she could come to a W. A. meeting on Tuesday. The lady can't. The lady has a bridge club meeting on Tuesday. Mother is upset.

Which gives us an opportunity to deliver ourselves of a judgment. It is not the big sins that worry us in this life. It's the evangelists who worry about these. It is the minor, bush-league sinning, we believe, that results in our wearing a fedora instead of a halo. Most people prefer to do the right thing if it's not too much trouble. We are all Christians . . . when it is reasonably convenient. On Tuesday we will play bridge. We hope we're not being unkind.

A Note of Despair

We don't want to make this a column of criticism, but we do feel that civilization has faltered in its onward course when we, in Winnipeg—several thousand miles from either seaboard, have to listen to our radio raucously belch forth details of the weather in the straits of Belle Isle and on Vancouver Island in order to find out whether we'll need our winter overcoat tomorrow. If this be progress, we'd prefer to catch a cold.

Another Nautical Note

Strange though it may seem, even in Winnipeg we find it difficult to sign up members for the Newmarket Yacht Club. Unless we get a little more encouragement, we'll be forced to believe that our readers look upon the N. Y. C. as more or less of a joke.

Did we hear someone snicker? O. G. T.

ROBINS BRING EARLY SPRING

The roads are very good here now and everybody is making real use of them by getting their wood up and drawing logs to the mill.

There were three robins seen at E. Hamilton's last week. One wonders where they would go when the cold night came.

Groundhogs are out early this year. There have been a lot caught in traps around here.

Mrs. M. Miller has been sick in bed for a few days.

There was a lovely time spent at the dance held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norton on Friday night.

Bethel

The women's missionary society and the ladies' aid of this appointment held their February meeting at the home of Mrs. John Morton when some 30 of those interested enjoyed the afternoon and evening.

Some through sickness in the homes were unable to be present. The quilts which were started at the last meeting are well under way, supervised by Mrs. Lizzie Fairbairn.

Rev. T. V. Hart was hurriedly called home from Toronto last week. Owing to sickness in the home, Mr. Breckonridge, who supplied for Mr. Hart last Sunday, brought with him a friend, Mr. Narian, who took part in the service as the former was fighting off a cold.

Both these young men are in the ordination class, and will be going on fields under the United Church of Canada.

Next Sunday Mr. Jones will be with Mr. Hart at the morning service. Special music is being prepared for the Easter Sunday service, which will be a communion one.

The saddest day (crucifixion) and the gladdest day (resurrection) are only one day apart. On these days the great love our savior gave for humanity should be remembered.

Sabbath-school is 10 a.m., and preaching service is at 11 a.m. A welcome to any.

Mr. T. Miedema has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bridgeman in Burlington for a few days.

Mrs. A. Nienhuis and Mr. F. Nienhuis spent a day in Toronto last week.

The community is sorry to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. J. Vandergoot Saturday night. She had been sick only a short time and her death was a shock to their many friends.

Deepest sympathy is extended to her husband, J. Vandergoot, and their daughter, Wilma.

YOUNG COUPLE ARE SHOWERED

Mrs. Wellington Cole passed away at her home at Ravenshoe last Thursday. Although Mrs. Cole has been bed-ridden for over a year and a half she had seemed quite bright and cheery until about a week ago, when she took the flu and pneumonia developed, which she was unable to throw off in her weak condition. Mrs. Cole was a member of Maplehill Baptist church.

Mr. Cole predeceased her just three months ago, and their only child, Alma, died about 20 years ago, but she leaves to mourn six brothers and a sister, a great many other relatives and a whole host of friends to whom is extended very sincere sympathy.

The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon, March 6, from the Queensville United church. Pastor J. R. Armstrong was in charge of the service. He was assisted by a minister of the Zion Mennonite church and Rev. F. W. Madden of Queensville. Interment was at Queensville cemetery.

There was a good attendance at church on Sunday, considering the numbers who were ill with flu. All seem to be on the mend.

The Y. P. S. next Tuesday, March 16, will be in the charge of the music committee, and it is expected that there will be some special music from Toronto. Graham Reeve, a Jarvis Baptist Seminary student, is expected to bring the message for the evening. Everybody is most cordially invited.

A social evening at the home of Mrs. Bert Scott is being planned for March 23 under the auspices of the Y. P. S. and in the charge of the recreation committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Brown of Baldwin were visitors at the home of Mrs. Bert Plummer over the weekend.

On Saturday evening a shower was held at Mr. B. Plummer's for the bride and groom of two weeks, Mr. and Mrs. E. Brown. There were about 70 people there, including many of Ernie's friends from Vivian. A shower of many practical gifts was given to the happy couple, after which they were showered with confetti.

The groom thanked the gathering for the pleasant evening and the gifts bestowed on him and his wife. The rest of the evening was spent in music, and Mrs. Love gave two very interesting readings, and the Fockler brothers from Vivian gave some music. Albert Rundle and E. Brown played. A delicious lunch brought a very happy evening to a close.

Mrs. H. Knights has been in Toronto a few days as Mrs. Ardill (Mrs. Knights' mother) underwent an operation. She is doing well.

School NotesMORE ABOUT DENMARK
(By Pedagogue)

In Denmark today every family is a member of two co-operative societies, as producers and consumers. The result of this shows that, in contrast to an almost exactly opposite percentage in America, in Denmark 68.5 per cent. of the price of produce goes to the producer and 31.5 to the distributor.

For educational exuberance, there are 200 agricultural colleges, a great chain of folk high schools for adult education, the students ranging in age from 20 to 60 years, and innumerable winter courses for men and summer courses for women.

As for social conditions, there is no question of child labor or night work; mothers are protected; women work in industry under the pleasantest conditions. For housing they have the "miracle houses" subsidized by the government to the extent of 90 per cent.

ROBERT SIMPSON GAVE

off, and I did. Our work was principally painting carriages. There was a lot of stripping. I won first two or three times at the fall fair for stripping. Sometimes we painted the stripes and sometimes we used silver and gold leaf.

Mr. Wood was the son of Anne Silverlock and Joseph Wood, both born in England. They were married in Toronto, where Mr. Wood was born. They moved to Newmarket when he was seven months old.

"Did you know Sir William Mulock when you were a boy at school?" "Yes, I went to school with him. I think he is a little older than I am."

Mr. Wood recalled an incident which occurred after he had left school and become a painter. "Mrs. Mulock lived on Prospect St., north of where the high school is now. I was painting a door for her, when to my surprise someone cursed me. But it was only a parrot. Mrs. Mulock apologized to me."

Mr. Wood recalled some of the merchants prominent in the early days. "Robert Simpson married a Bolsford. Danford Roche went to the city after Simpson died, but was not successful. Simpson's store was about where Smith's hardware now is. Roche's was south of Simpson's. McMaster sold everything from groceries to wagon-wheel spokes. He was down on Water St. where W. J. Patterson now lives."

Of early factories Mr. Wood recalled: "James Allan's foundry was the principal business. He made plows, cultivators, etc. His partner was Thomas Hendry. Sam Sykes started a foundry after Allan's death. His partner was Charles Elvidge. William Cane started the first real factory, making wooden tubs, clothespins, sashes, etc."

Southern Hockey Not So Hot? Maybe Aurora Over-Confident

(As seen by a Barrie Examiner writer)

Barrie Colts beat Aurora Juniors 10-5 here Monday in the first game of their O. H. A. Junior B second round series. The locals had easily a margin of five goals over Aurora on the play and were always well in the lead, but the visitors never gave up trying and until the very end, Barrie fans were not quite sure whether the Colts could keep their lead or not.

Getting a substantial lead meant a lot to Coach Gordon Meeking of Barrie, because the second game was listed for Aurora and he wanted to take no chances on Aurora's ability on home ice.

As for Coach Charlie Rowntree of Aurora, the fans were quite agreed he was the most talkative mentor to appear locally this season, which is saying something because we've had a lot of eloquent orators around here in the visiting box.

Rowntree kept Referee Tracy Shaw of Toronto on the jump to the Aurora bench until it got tiresome to everybody concerned, then at the end of the first period, Rowntree hopped out on the ice and ambled down to the north net, where he carefully inspected the twine for reasons of his own, amid the hooting of the fans in that section.

Aurora Juniors won their group quite handsily without losing a game and beat Lindsay Midgents in the first round. Hockey in the group to our south cannot be overly hot. Fans here thought both Orillia and Parry Sound presented better opposition to the Colts this season. Maybe Aurora is better than the team appeared here. Some visitors say Aurora was caught over-confident over earlier success. Wednesday night's game in Aurora will tell.

At any rate Barrie Colts had weight, speed and combination over Aurora here Monday. The visitors presented in their yellow and black jacks with the mercantile lettering, a pesky band of hard checkers, fairly fast, but they played awfully poor team attack and their shooting was nothing to give goalie Eldon Goring much to worry about.

In the first period Barrie led by 5-1 and the fans figured they had a pushover. Just two minutes had gone when the Colts ganged in and Don Bowen was able to take the puck around the net unmolested and tucked it in from a corner past the surprised Groves. Half a minute later Jack Dyer uncorked one of his characteristic rushes from end to end and Groves had little chance to save from a few feet out.

About four minutes had gone when James tripped Dyer as he was right in again. James was banished and Storey came on to take a penalty shot. He roared down like an express train on the puck but his shot hardly left the ice and missed the net altogether.

Aurora got into the game when James got back and in a scramble Wrightman pushed the puck in the Barrie net. It gave the 400 or so Aurora fans something to cheer for and they nearly raised the roof. But not for long. Bill Long went down the left rail and fired one in from the side for Barrie's third goal. With eight minutes to go in the opening frame, Jones and Scott each scored an individual goal for Barrie within half a minute.

Play in the second period was much more even. Aurora came out more determined and there was no scoring for seven minutes. Then Roy Brock broke away, walked through the defence as if it was not even there, pulled the goalie out and tucked the puck in for the nearest goal of the season. Jones came back with his second goal at the halfway mark. Then Aurora got going and Watts picked up a pass-out from James for a nice goal. Just before the period ended, Barnard scored another near the end of the period. At one time the Colts led by 7-1, but they began to realize the opposition was better than it looked when Wrightman tallied the fourth goal for Aurora after five minutes of the third period.

Barrie's new pinch-hitter, Whitey Walker, came into notice just after that as he scored two goals, both by persistent boring-in tactics around the Aurora net. Twice he stole the puck from Aurora rushers around the blue line. The last Barrie goal came from Bowen's stick on a pass from Long. The score looked good just then, with six goals to work on, but Aurora cut it down when Barnard scored with two minutes to go. It was a gift. He fired a long one hardly off the ice. Goring stopped the puck with his skate, then stepped on it and slipped on his side, pushing the puck in with him.

For Aurora, our choice was Wilson, centre on the second line, as the more dangerous player to stop, even though he failed to score, and Wrightman and Barnard, who each scored two goals, were next best. Groves turned in a performance in goal which was not to be ashamed of. He was bombarded with plenty of pucks in every period, considerably more than Goring of Barrie had to handle. James on defence was rugged, and although slow and clumsy on skates, was fairly hard to stop.

Jones, Bowen and Walker were double-scoring for the Colts, but there was not much to choose between the players on the night. Brock turned in a smart game all the way, and is our choice for tops among the locals. Dyer was not so good as usual, although he scored one nifty goal. Dick Livingston, recovered from his ankle injury, was back in uniform but was not used much. Storey did a lot of useful work in relieving on defence.

Barrie took advantage of Aurora penalties. The Colts scored three goals when the visitors were short-handed. Barrie had two penalties and Aurora scored one goal as a result.

Very annoying to players and fans alike, was the blowing of tin whistles by various pin-heads around the rink. Some were from Barrie and some from Aurora.

Aurora had seven players from Newmarket and one from Bradford. So we presume there must have been at least three from Aurora.

The visitors arrived 250 strong by special train, plus another 150 or so via motor. They had the whole south end of Barrie arena reserved, and how they roared when their team scored a goal. But on the whole it must have been a dismal and disappointing trip.

The ice was in perfect condition, keen and fast. Barrie band was out, and the attendance, while smaller than for the Parry Sound game, was still nearly 2,000.

BARRIE TAKES LEAD OF 10-5

Aurora's Better Than Score Indicates In First Encounter

By Chas. E. Cunningham

Making a strong offensive drive, Barrie Colts garnered a five-goal lead over Aurora Juniors by defeating them 10-5 in a third round O. H. A. Junior "B" match at the Barrie arena on Monday evening.

The Barrie team started off with a bang and at the two-minute mark had flashed the red light for the first counter. In less than half a minute later the home-town fans had added another counter and looked to be on the way to a one-sided victory. The Aurora team put on a little extra spurt and Wrightman banged one in for Aurora after a ganging attack, but the Colts were not to be denied and when the gong sounded at the end of the first period the Red team had a 5-1 lead.

In the second period the Aurora team seemed to get better acquainted with the different style of play and matched stride for stride with the home outfit, both teams bulging the net twice. Watts and Barnard received credit for the Aurora goals.

The third semester proved to be just as fast as the first, with the Barrie team showing to advantage with a little extra speed and weight to carry them through. Barrie flashed the light three times to two replies from Aurora, Wrightman and Barnard setting the Aurora goals.

On the whole the Barrie team deserved their win, but when the Aurora team play the class of hockey they are capable of dishing up, the Barrie team are hardly five goals better and before the series is over the Barrie team will know they have been in a game.

Line-up: Aurora—goal, Groves; defence, James, Harden; centre, Watts; wings, Barnard, McGhee; subs, Wilson, Mair, Wrightman, Ferguson, Barker.

Barrie—goal, Goring; defence, Jones, Dyer; centre, Bowen; wings, Scott, Long; subs, Brock, Walker, Leigh, Livingston and Storey.

Referee—Tracy Shaw, Toronto.

ROUND WON BY COLTS BY 17-9

Aurora's Fight Gamely But Go Down Before Better Team

By Ralph M. Adams

Outplayed by a bigger and tougher outfit the Aurora Juniors passed out of the O. H. A. Jr. "B" series last night when Barrie Colts won by a three-goal margin.

Before the game started two minutes silence was observed in respect for Howie Morenz, hockey's immortal centre, the star, who passed the last great Blue Line last Monday night.

The Auroras forced the play from the opening bell and tied Barrie up in their own end nearly the entire first period. After one and a half minutes Wilson rapped the first counter home on Barnard's pass. Barrie finally tied the count at the 14-minute mark, Dyer registering on a solo rush.

In the second the Colts added two markers, Dyer and Jones doing the sniping. During this period Aurora drew four penalties and the northerners, two. Some of the poorest official decisions seen in this district this season featured the second and third periods.

As long as the player wore a red shirt it seemed he could do anything and get away with it. This second frame was the longest period some of the fans ever sat through. Stoppages in play lengthened the period to 45 minutes.

Barrie added a trio of counters in the third, while Aurora beat Goring for two, Barnard taking McGhee's relay, while Wilson registered a solo.

Groves and Dyer had a little socking fracas near the end of the game. No doubt the Barrie Colts were the better team, especially the defence. The Aurora kids tried hard and had the Colts backed into their own end for nearly two periods. Barrie's shining lights were Goring, the stellar net minder. Dyer and Jones, the defencemen, were in there often for the forwards. Scott and Bowen were the best up front.

From Aurora's standpoint Groves was the three-star performer, making some saves that bordered on the sensational.

James and Harden tried hard jarring the incoming forwards frequently. Up front Wilson, Barnard, McGhee, Wrightman and Mair all turned in a first-class effort.

Teams—Barrie: goal, Goring; defence, Jones and Dyer; centre, Bowen; wings, Long and Scott; subs, Livingston, Leigh, Walker, Storey and Marshall.

Aurora: goal, Groves; defence, James and Harden; centre, Wilson; wings, Wrightman and Mair; subs, Watts, Barnard, McGhee, Ferguson and Barker.

Referee—Pete Woods, Stayner.

The game ended 7-4 against Aurora, making Barrie winners on the round by 17-9.

ABSTINENCE FROM

"Mistakes and errors arise from use of it. It impairs one's judgment and will-power. Thus we see that alcoholic drink hinders man in his daily work and naturally his earning power is decreased. Many positions are closed to the imbibitor. Bus-drivers, airmen, trainmen, and street-car operators are prohibited because of their profession from taking any alcoholic drinks while on duty.

"A man under the influence of liquor staggers in mind before he staggers in body. The power of self-control is undermined, judgment is shaken, reason fails to govern action, the will fails to control emotions, because alcohol is a narcotic and a stupefier.

"Why should I abstain from the use of alcoholic beverages? As one born in a Christian land I have a duty to society which can only be rendered honestly and efficiently when I develop myself mentally, physically and spiritually. This can be done only when I practise total abstinence. Am I my brother's keeper?"

Miss Henry's address, given here only in part, was praised, but older speakers won the competition.

FLOWERS AT HER FEET

By MARIE BLIZARD

COPYRIGHT: RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

By winning a $500 slogan contest, Alix Carey earns a promotion in the advertising agency where she is employed and enlists the personal interest of John Sayre, young president of the agency, whom she secretly admires. Coming to New York following her parents' death, she has made close friends of Kathleen Crosby and her cousin, Kim Preston. Alix and Sayre begin to mix business and pleasure. She sees him frequently and begins to care for him deeply, but suspects he is in love with Carol, a cousin of his. Meanwhile Alix enters a contest, wins a $500 prize, and is visiting New York. Suddenly offered a better position elsewhere, Alix discusses it with John. Kim proposes to Alix but she puts him off, and then John tells her he is falling in love. She is amazed when Carol displays a bracelet that John had shown Alix in his office. John cannot understand why Alix's feelings towards him have changed. A few weeks later she agrees to marry Kim.

(Now go on with the story)

CHAPTER 22

The day she told Kim she would marry him they were having a picnic. There were only the two of them. It was a Saturday afternoon and they had taken bicycles into the country and sandwiches in a box.

It was a pink and white and blue afternoon. The sky was a pure azure with a fleecy of cottony clouds. The pink apple blossoms covering the trees in the orchard where they rested were as festive as frocks at a garden party.

"I can see these things, but I don't feel them," Alix thought. This beauty was wasted on her. Penitence seen from an elevated train would have stirred her as much.

A thrush burst into song. The lead-up to Alix's "yes" came in this manner:

Kim began to quote Keats, "That thou, light-winged Dryad of the trees, in some melodious plot of beechen green, and shadows numberless, singest of summer in full-throated ease."

He finished the lovely "Ode to a Nightingale," and to herself Alix repeated the lines, "I cannot see what flowers are at my feet, Nor what soft incense hangs upon the boughs."

Redness gripped at her throat. "It's not pink and blue and white," Kim said. "It's fierce, bright orange and green and hot hennas and faded blues. It's wild laughter and seething undertones. It's languorous as twilight and burning as the stark noon sun."

It wouldn't be this. It wouldn't be endless days and nights. It wouldn't be this same world where a girl walked to and fro in a room, touching things aimlessly, staring down time.

It was a place where you might forget, where you might become a new person. A person with everything as new as your new name. Alix Preston wouldn't be Alix Carey any more. There wouldn't be anything of her left.

"When are you going, Kim?" "Any time I hoped you'd change your mind and go with me."

Alix wanted to ask him if he'd still want to take her if he knew that she had no heart to love him with, if he'd be satisfied just to have her there to be his playmate.

He said, "I know you're not in love with me, Alix, but we're pretty much the same. I don't believe in this love-you-forever passion that seems to get so many people all stirred up. I'm pretty keen about you and I'm satisfied with the way you feel about me. Will you take me on for Mexico?"

"Do you really feel that way?" She squinted up at him in the sun. When she did that, it made Kim think of a girl squinting up at him and saying, "You'll like Alix, Kim."

Kathleen. Kathleen was so different from Alix. "I do," he said, and broke into a rollicking song in French. "All right," she said.

She wouldn't tell him when she'd marry him. "I can't walk out on my job right now, Kim. There are too many things to be done."

Give yourself time, Alix. Time for what? What was there in the whole wide world you needed time for? All you need is something to fill this timeless void!

Neither of them thought to tell Kathleen about it. Something had occurred between John Sayre and Alix, Kathleen knew. What it was she did not know. Alix had looked it up inside of her. Those first few weeks when she had come to the Crosby apartment, entering gaily, chatting enthusiastically and then fading into silence and the hurt came out to play on her face, Kathleen knew that there was a fever burning in her.

She wanted to discover what had done this to Alix, wanted to soothe and help her, but Alix had kept silent and Kathleen would not probe.

Both these girls who were so unlike shared a distaste for the feminine trait of parading personal troubles before any eyes, however friendly.

So Kathleen could not guess the anguish that drove Alix. Because she was afraid that that speaking his name would bring John Sayre out of her heart with fresh grief, she turned to Kim. Kim was not a young man to inspire confidences and Alix knew well enough no man wants to hear about another who was to Alix what John Sayre was.

Kim kept her from thinking too much, from her endless prowling. With him she was active. They played fast tennis, hiked in the country, read and argued. They fought over music and over food and then they found it all amusing. Yes, Alix was glad to have Kim. She would have been content to have it the way it was, but she knew it couldn't go on that way forever and she was seeking an escape.

One afternoon she was away and the day he talked about it, she wanted Mexico. She wished that she could have gone with him without marrying him.

But after she said she would, she was glad if not happy. She would have Kim. She wouldn't ever be alone again.

She'd been alone entirely since she had come to New York. Friends like you. They have affection for you, but they don't love you. Perhaps Kim—who said he didn't know what a "love-you-forever" passion was—would love her.

Perhaps, in time, she'd forget the way dark eyes looked under a quizzical brow. Perhaps, in time, with Kim's hand to hold her own, she'd find edges of the dagger that rested under her heart less sharp.

Perhaps she wouldn't feel her face grow red and then drain to white just because she thought she heard a familiar step.

Perhaps some day she wouldn't mind going into a restaurant, to the theatre, or even on the streets. She minded now because she might meet him.

One afternoon she was crossing Grand Central when she thought she saw him. For an instant the big terminal swayed and her legs felt strange and weak.

If she were married to Kim—she changed that thinking: When I am married to Kim—I'll have a haven. I'll know that I can't feel that way about John. I'll have that nice, safe little thought to carry with me.

Girls don't have broken hearts forever. People don't carry wild grief a lifetime. He isn't dead. Oh, no, he isn't dead! But this is worse! If I were a widow, people would come and grieve with me, accept my sorrow. But I've lost my love and I must hide it. Even if people knew, they would be impatient.

She felt sorrow for all the women in the world who know that grief as great as death's grief. Those women who cannot wear their mourning, who have no right to the dignity of sorrow.

"To be tragic is to be chic; to be discontented is to be dowdy," she had read that somewhere in a magazine. It brought a bitter smile to her face. Even a bitter smile was rare for her.

She managed to appear happy while she was with Kim. "Alix," I told Kathleen last night. She wants us to come over for a supper party Sunday night," Kim said to her.

That Sunday lacked but a few days of being the anniversary of that first party Kathleen had given when Alix was present.

Again there were the grandiose frocks, the white flannels, supper on the terrace. This year Alix sat with her back to the view toward the river. Was it only a year since she had sat in that same twilight and vowed in her heart that John Sayre would know her one day?

He would never come through that door now. She wished that the party were over.

Kathleen had kissed her when she had come in, had murmured that she was glad, but that was all.

The others left and Kathleen, Kim and Alix were alone. Kathleen looked drawn and tired.

Kim bent to kiss Kathleen and she drew back. Alix saw her draw away.

She saw Kim's startled expression, and her eyes went quickly to Kathleen's.

Then she knew that Kathleen loved Kim.

CHAPTER 23

Kathleen loved Kim. Kim was going to marry Alix. To these three those two simple phrases were words in letters of fire. Kim's face flushed in and out of their consciousness.

To Kathleen it was the long, slow ache. To Kim, it was a charming idea slightly clouded by his sense of not doing exactly the fair thing. He couldn't have told you why, but he kept Kathleen out of his mind as much as he could.

At best, it was impossible. At best, it had seemed like something else in this weird dream she was living, living without feeling. It was something that was going to happen soon yet there was no soon. Time was timeless and as vague as the void in which she lived. She said she would marry Kim, because Kim had said she would.

Kim had said she would. That was why she said she would. She said it the way she felt, as though her voice and some strange new mind were occupying her body. A new mind and she had had nothing to do with her old one or her heart.

They were strangers in her house and they were going to make over that house. In a little time you would never know what it had been like before when it was young.

Wasn't she still young? Twenty-four wasn't old. But it can be very old when it has embraced experience, warmth, its maturing years at the fires of love and felt the chill of dying love.

Alix grew older in those few weeks. It was as though experience were a sculptor molding the contour of her cheek, drawing her mouth a little straighter, softening the first bitterness that showed there with a tempered line of sympathy. Sympathy she had learned to feel for Kathleen Crosby.

Why hadn't Kathleen told her she cared for Kim? Why hadn't Kathleen known that this was going to happen and have saved herself?

Alix couldn't go to her then, when she had not spoken save with her eyes, and say, "I know, Kathleen. I'm terribly sorry about it all but, you see I didn't know."

She couldn't say, "Here he is. Here is Kim. I'm giving him back to you." Because Kim wasn't a book or a flower. Kim was a man who knew his own mind.

Alix thought he did. Helen Preston didn't agree with her.

Kim's mother had never met Alix; she'd been in Europe during the winter and spring. She'd heard enough of the girl from Kim and Kathleen, believed her to be the mutual friend of both.

Then Kim had greeted her at the bank, saying casually, "Mother, I want you to ask Alix Carey to dinner as soon as you can."

And she had answered, "Why?" "Because I'm going to marry her and I think you two ought to meet."

She said she would and sent for Kathleen.

Helen Preston was only 18 years older than her son. She was not the Whistler type of mother. She was only 44 and looked 35. Her point of view was as modern as her clothes. She was Kathleen's first cousin.

Kathleen found her in her dim drawing room, issuing orders to a household staff, answering the telephone, opening, reading and throwing away the accumulated post.

"Why the hurried call to me, Cousin Helen? It looks as though you had plenty to do without me around today."

"Umm," Helen said, and gave Kathleen a glance that saw more than you'd think in one so short. "How was Paris?"

"Lovely. There are no Americans there now. But Venice, my dear! After waiting all my life to see Venice, the only time I could stand it was in the moonlight."

"I may go over this summer," Kathleen said slowly.

Helen Preston wheeled around in her chair. "That will be all. Katie, you can go now and you, Hans," she dismissed her servants. She left her desk and went over to sit on the divan with Kathleen.

"Tell me about it," Kathleen said.

"Do you take sugar, Kathleen?" Helen poured fragrant tea while she chattered. "It was very exciting. I saw King Edward and Barbara Hutton. She's lovely! They weren't together, of course. I bought two wretched frocks in Paris and went on a mad cruise to Dalmatia. Kathleen, what's this nonsense about Kim marrying this Alix Carey person?"

Her question came so unexpectedly Kathleen was not prepared for it. Her cup rattled against its china saucer held by a hand that shook unaccountably.

"It isn't nonsense, Cousin Helen," she said quietly.

"I told you, Helen answered shortly. "In the first place, she isn't an Alix Carey person. She's a gentlewoman and a friend of mine."

"Really?" her cousin asked with lifted brows.

"Why should you doubt it?" (To be continued)

A LEADER'S INSTITUTE

It has been our desire for some time to bring together those people who have been actively engaged in study group work on adult education. Plans are now being laid to make this a realization in the form of a Leaders' Institute at Pickering college on March 24.

The regular monthly district meeting will be held on the evening of this date as a grand finale for the Leaders' Institute. It is expected that we shall again secure some outstanding leader in the educational field.

The sessions which will be held during the day are intended primarily for the people who are really anxious to do something. The day's discussions will be led by Taylor Statten; H. H. Hannam; Mrs. Stavert; and members of the committee. David and Edith Smith will be present to outline the principles of recreation and to lead in folk dancing. Community singing and music appreciation will provide a well-rounded program.

Since our 150 people have begun studying, we have heard the desire expressed by them to do more reading. This is very encouraging, and it is our purpose to launch a reading club at the time of the Leaders' Institute. The only requirement will be a desire on the part of each person joining, to read at least one worth-while book a month.

It appears that the coming of spring will bring a change of emphasis in our extension service. The Leaders' Institute offers an introduction to a type of leadership training which could be carried on during the summer.

"Ski-ing"

By Golden Glow

We can't all go to the Swiss Alps, nor yet to Banff in the Canadian Rockies, nor yet to Huntsville or the Caledon Hills near Orangeville, nor yet to the grand little hills in the grounds of the Summit golf course just south of Bond Lake. But somewhere, within striking distance, we can find a hill, I have no doubt, if we have a pair of skis, and want to go ski-ing badly enough.

The going down is perfectly gorgeous, but the long trail back makes you think of the remark the Chinaman made after watching the crowds at the Montreal toboggan slides: "Swish—walkee five mile!" But the walk back is just a part of the good time; and it is all splendid healthy exercise in the great out-of-doors.

The modern skis are practically the same as used formerly, except that they are longer and narrower and less complicated.

It is interesting to note the trend of fashions nowadays in the effect ski-ing has on women's apparel. You are practically forced to wear sensible, appropriate clothes, but it is amusing, I might say amazing too, to see the variations from the standard set for safety and comfort. You would think some were trying for a prize at a masquerade impersonating a highwayman or a pirate. But all are terribly in earnest nevertheless, intent on amusement.

You don't need a great deal of snow, so when we had a not very heavy one last week it was sufficient to send all the skiers to their clothes-closets to dig out the old skis, and betake themselves in all haste to their favorite runway before the next thaw arrived. I went with some friends to the "Summit" and it was great fun to watch.

Last Thursday our local College ski enthusiasts left for Limberlost, Muskoka, and we all felt that they were doomed to disappointment if the weather we had that day continued, ankle-deep slush, turning to rain. But, marvellous to relate, it turned cold, and we had a rare weekend, and I think everyone in town who owned other skis or a toboggan or even a sled were out on every hill.

As I write, it is still quite cold, and yesterday, Sunday, we had a remarkable day, so white and bright.

We had quite a nice little

A recent decision of the department of health for Scotland, with reference to medicine containing a proportion of whisky, will be of interest not only to all W. C. T. U. members, but also to those who do not think with us. The question arose in connection with a prescription for medicine issued by a panel doctor to an insured person, which contained 5/4 ounces of whisky.

The mixture was duly dispensed and supplied. When the prescription reached the Glasgow Insurance committee, however, the propriety of such a mixture being a charge on national health insurance funds was immediately challenged and submitted to the department of health for Scotland for their observations.

The matter was then considered by the department's pharmacologist, with the result that the department has ruled that whisky and other alcoholic liquors cannot be regarded as drugs for the purposes of medical benefit, and their cost cannot form a proper charge on the national health insurance fund.

A pronouncement such as this, coming from the government department of health, is a decided step in the right direction.

SEED OATS

FARMERS BEWARE what seed grain you buy to sow this coming Spring. There is a great deal of grain being offered for sale in Ontario for feed. A grain shortage has resulted in a demand for Western Feed Oats. These oats are being sold for feed but some farmers may re-clean them and use part of them for seed.

Germination Tests of samples of such oats have shown as low percentages as from 20% to 70%.

The Sowing of Such Seed may have disastrous results on the crops.

A survey of the grain held in Ontario would indicate there is sufficient good seed to be obtained at home, and all farmers who must purchase seed grain this year should make careful selection upon Germination Tests. A farmer can make a simple and accurate test at home by sprouting a number of kernels either between two sheets of dampened blotting paper or in a box of earth. The sample sprouted must be a fair average of the lot.

Milk boosts community income

In thousands of communities milk is the biggest single source of income for farmers. Trade operators in these communities largely on milk money. The total milk money going to dairy farmers in Canada annually is nearly $200,000,000.

Milk needs many outlets. Selling milk in bottles provides a market for only 1/3 of the milk produced. Ice cream, butter, cheese, dry and evaporated milk and many by-products must be manufactured and sold daily so that milk money may flow back to the dairy communities week after week without interruption.

Since Gail Borden's invention of condensing milk in a vacuum 80 years ago, Borden has pioneered in research work that has meant new uses for milk and new markets for milk producers. Research and efficient merchandising of milk in all its forms are first-hand reasons why Canada is becoming one of the world's greatest producers (as well as consumers) of dairy products.

Newmarket Girl Became Accomplished Art Teacher

the family to Pine Orchard near Newmarket, Ontario. Here Andrew Lambie became a leading citizen and an elder in the local Friends meeting. According to an early resolution, he acquired a competence by the age of 60, retired from farming, moved to town, and devoted the rest of his days to church work and benevolence.

After attending the local rural school Margaret studied art in Toronto under several teachers of distinction, of whom some were German. She then took the training as a nurse in Toronto General hospital, but she never practised professionally. With her family she occasionally took extensive travels across the American continent.

It so happened that her return from California to Newmarket coincided with the journey of Francis Anson from England to Newmarket, where he became supply preacher at the Friends meeting, of which Margaret Lambie was the organist. They were married Nov. 15, 1909, according to the ancient Quaker way, by appearing in meeting joining hands, and publicly pledging their love to each other. Seven ministers of various denominations were present and took part in the service, yet they married themselves, according to Friends practice. At the subsequent reception about 70 Friends signed the certificate which Francis and Margaret had themselves prepared.

Margaret became a real helpmeet to her husband in his work as a Friends pastor in various places. Her concept of life was that the proper function for a woman was to help some man to become what he otherwise could never be.

So for twenty-seven and a half years she put her life into his, enriched his personality with hers, fortified him with her strength, inspired him with her courage, challenged him with optimism, counselled him with her sagacity. It was she who advised that he resume his college studies, it was she who conceived the plan that they should leave Canada and go to Richmond, Indiana, that he might enter Earlham College, it was she who had the vision, the courage, the enthusiasm and the willingness to economize to the limit to make this possible. And so after Francis Anson was 30, he became a freshman, sat in class with young girls, and determined to show them what college really was. At first Francis planned to take some special studies but Margaret envisioned the degree. And, so, with such a backing it came to pass that in Francis Anson's senior year at Earlham, the students petitioned the president that he teach a course in Old Testament history. And thus he became a college teacher.

Whatever academic degrees he may have attained or open doors of usefulness he discovered are their joint accomplishment.

Independence of judgment, of action and of maintenance were essential elements of her personality. Her father held that a man who could not secure a competency by the time he was 60 was a failure. His daughter, Margaret, determined to be self-reliant.

Probably never in her life did she buy anything for which she did not and did not pay cash. Her husband had also, for years, made this an inflexible rule. To them it was not only an article of faith that the Heavenly Father's plan is to give His children day by day their daily bread—it was a principle of common sense. Her sense of value was extraordinary.

Mrs. Anson gave art lessons at Guilford College and later at Salem College, and there are hundreds of her students' canvases in North Carolina which will be enduring memorials of her love of the beautiful. Some of her canvases were accepted and hung in the Indiana annual state exhibits. Her appreciation of the beautiful was also expressed in her love of flowers. No matter where she was she would soon create a garden. Roses were her favorites, and while health permitted she loved to be up soon after daylight and find thrilling pleasure in tending her fragrant and beautiful flowers.

In 1930, she and her husband realized a long ambition by visiting many European countries, and she found her heart's desire in the great galleries in London, Paris, Florence, Rome, and elsewhere.

Her piety was practical—not emotional—Christ was to her an indispensable factor in human experience.

Her favorite scripture was Isaiah 40:10: "Fear thou not, for I am with thee, be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness."

Her vigor failed about two years ago, but she continued active till last August. Since then her strength declined. For over three months she had to lie continuously upon her back, but she did not murmur. She was removed to a local hospital Thursday, Feb. 25, and on Saturday, Feb. 27, at 1.35 p.m., she joined the immortals.

She is survived by her husband, Francis C. Anson, by one brother, William Lambie, and one sister, Mrs. Marmaduke Hutchinson, and by numerous nephews and nieces of the first, second and third generation.

John Botham, well-known farmer in this district, and an implement agent for more than 40 years, died at his home here on Friday last in his 75th year. He was born on a farm a short distance from Schomberg and lived here all his life. He was a friend of the peace for 33 years.

The Lenten meeting was held in the Anglican church on Wednesday evening, when Rev. F. V. Abbott was in charge. The lantern slides on the mission work in the diocese of Saskatchewan were most interesting and instructive.

The Women's Institute sponsored another euchre in their club room on Friday evening last week. Prize-winners were: first, Mrs. E. G. Lloyd and Bernard Gardiner; second, Miss Cora Aitchison and Mr. G. Brown. These euchres are proving very popular.

Miss Lorna Dillane, Messrs. Lester and Grant Dillane spent Sunday at their home here.

Another resident of Schomberg passed away on Friday last when Charles Fleming died at the home of his son Ira in Lefroy. Mr. and Mrs. Fleming were on a visit with their son when Mr. Fleming fell on the ice and broke his hip some three weeks ago. He was unable to withstand the shock, due to his advanced age of almost 83 years.

Funeral service took place on Monday from the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Farquhar in Schomberg, to the Schomberg cemetery. A third and very sad death of the week occurred on Thursday last week when Pearl Cherry, wife of Lorne Ellison, passed away at her home near here following an illness of some weeks. The late Mrs. Ellison was in her 45th year, and leaves, besides her husband, two sons and one daughter. Funeral took place on Saturday afternoon with Rev. F. V. Abbott in charge. BOGARTOWN DISAGREES WITH MONKEY THEORY

The Bogartown community club met on Wednesday evening of last week.

Alan Twining, noted Christian naturalist of Toronto, had charge of the entire program. He provided some good entertainment as well as spiritual advice.

His pictures of Canadian wild life were superb, and his many sarcastic comments on the evolution theory were amusing to all.

Most of his listeners were convinced at the end of the sermon that Mr. Twining is not much relation to a chimpanzee or gorilla, although, as he said, "There may be some resemblance; but I have a soul and no monkey can develop that."

The next club meeting will be held next Wednesday evening at the school house.
